However, in this post, I will explain how you can "create" this password and describe two other ways to access Admin Shares on standalone machines.. Map Admin Shares with the built- in administrator account ^The network password that I referred to above is the password of the built- in administrator account, which is disabled by default in Windows 8.. Here I assume that you have another account with admin privileges To enable the administrator account, you just have to launch a command prompt with administrator privileges and then type net user administrator /active: yes..
